Sigma Now Offers Subscription Services to Target Small Business & Consumers

Dallas, TX – May 1, 2006: Sigma Surveillance, Inc. (hereafter known as Sigma) has responded to feedback from the public and is now offering a subscription service, as another way to make surveillance technology readily available to a broader audience.

Sigma had conducted a survey recently to small business owners and consumers, to see how best bundle their product offerings and financing options to create greater accessibility to the benefits of video surveillance technology. Upon collection and review of data, Sigma found that the three greatest issues facing small business' and consumers were:

1. They want to see a simple "boxed" solution
2. Availability of a low monthly fee, instead of buying product outright, to lessen immediate burden of cost
3. Maintenance of system for small business' or homes without staff to manage it

In order to address this, Sigma has put together a variety of subscription options and packages to suit the budgets of consumers and small business owners alike, with fully configured Dali™ Surveillance packages starting as low as $300.00* per month with included monthly maintenance. "The security and peace of mind you get from knowing you're protected is something that everyone can now enjoy." says Madeline Hernandez, Business Development for Sigma, "This technology isn't just for your local bank any longer, this is a solution for everyone, anywhere."

"There's one thing to be sure to mention, however, is that this new service is excellent for small business, such as convenient stores, and gas stations as well as homes & daycares, however this "boxed" subscription service isn't going to work in schools, transportation systems, and other larger install bases," Usman Syal, Technical Director for Sigma, warned, "The subscription service is perfect for consumers, but for Schools and larger enterprises whom are all unique in their video surveillance integration needs, a boxed solution is just not feasible."

Sigma is proud of the fact that they're able to offer a solution to fit the needs of every level of clientele. Surveillance technology is no longer for the giants, now it's so affordable there's undoubtedly an emerging trend where we're going to start seeing it more often in places we'd never seen it before. And Sigma? Well they will continue to strive to make surveillance technologies more accessible to everyone, because they believe that everyone has the inherent right to the security and peace of mind that come with having a company like Sigma Surveillance on their side.
